

The Witchery of Muslins

It's the simplest thing in the world to conjure up a magnificent and artistic home with a bank-roll but to be able to beautify the house on a watch-the-dollar basis is another matter entirely.

That calls for planning and economy—and there is the point.

With Curtain Muslins one can drape and decorate to the heart's content; add a finishing touch to the work basket or book case, transform a plain, dreary looking table into a pretty dresser.

For instance, there is the bed—don't you think it would look more attractive with a canopy of fine dotted muslin over it? Wouldn't a spread of sheer muslin over some soft toned lining appear delightfully restful and can't you sort of picture the effect of deeply fluted valance of snowy white swiss, artistically draped?

Then there is the baby's crib—no doubt there is a wash stand that could be improved if draped with a self-figured muslin; possibly there are doorways that could be curtained to advantage; cushions that a clean coat would improve and windows—windows galore from bed chamber to kitchen to drape as only a woman can drape.

Curtain Muslins, as you may well imagine, present a wealth of possibilities in the way of delicate, economical interior decorations and as it happens they are very much in vogue.

On account of the enlarged demand we have increased our stock until we have on hand as comprehensive a line as one could possibly desire.

Prices, 8c, 10c, 12 1-2c, 15c, 18c and 25c Per Yard.

An insignificant looking apple tree in F. G. Rogers' yard, not appearing to be healthy enough to support itself, let alone producing apples, comes to the front with a huge apple, weighing a pound and measuring 14½ inches in circumference. The variety is Wolf River, rather unusual hereabouts. Besides this, the little tree has raised a lot more giants this year.

One of the oddities of the season was the sight early last evening of every other person on the streets carrying an umbrella, and all of them appeared extremely awkward in handling the apparatus, like as if it were some new-fangled contraption just being tried out for the first time. When there came a gentle trickle from the sky some of the possessors of the unusual implement raised it over their heads and then shed the water which otherwise would have spoiled their clothing. Others carried the umbrella in to hand, as if at a loss to understand its usage.
